Description :

PDF-07f22 | Twenty-first century life, for most people, will be an urban experience. As millions migrate to cities in search of opportunity and connection, our conception of how a city runs, uses resources and manages public services must change. The city itself must be reimagined as a matrix of functions and information, with digitized networks harnessing and multiplying the power of data. This is not the fu... Smart Cities, Digital Nations: Building Smart Cities in Emerging Countries and Beyond
