Description :

PDF-c76ae | In 1893, defying every convention of Victorian womanhood, Mary Kingsley set off alone for West Africa to collect botanical specimens. Unaccompanied except for native guides, she plunged boldly into forbidding jungles, often the first European—and almost always the first white woman—ever to arrive. Undaunted by tales of ferocious cannibals, she made friends with the tribes she met and collected... Travels in West Africa (National Geographic Adventure Classics)
